On November 20, the 36th World Children's Day, the Kuaishou Charity Foundation released “Over That Mountain,” a mini-documentary about its “Future Enlightenment Classroom” initiative. Filmed in rural schools across Gansu, Hebei, Shandong and other provinces, the short film captures the real changes that digital teaching, AI creation and tech study tours are bringing to children. Technology is becoming the new educational infrastructure, and the program’s core value is giving more children greater possibilities through the power of tech and AI.

Kuaishou Charity Foundation launched “Future Enlightenment Classroom” in 2024 and has since built a future-oriented public-education support system. By harnessing technology and AI, the project fosters all-round growth for children and adolescents. By the end of 2025 it had donated 40 digital classrooms, served more than 14,000 rural students and benefited 500,000 children in total, covering eight provincial-level regions.
