In response to the National Intellectual Property Publicity Week theme, to promote intellectual property protection and innovation in emerging fields, and support the development of new-quality productive forces, the 'Strengthening IP Protection, Empowering Digital Economy Development' seminar was successfully held at the Kuaishou campus on April 22. Jointly organized by the Beijing Intellectual Property Protection Association and Kuaishou Group, the event brought together representatives from the Beijing Municipal Intellectual Property Administration, relevant government departments, universities and research institutions, and internet enterprises to discuss new pathways for standard-essential patent (SEP) licensing in the internet industry and IP development in the AI era.
